Why are we doing this?

The COVID-19 pandemic has strained the hospital and health care systems, and providing basic medical services can often be a challenge due to oversaturation and shortage of resources. In critical situations like this, clear communication is key – especially if a patient does not have good command of English.

This is where Language for Life comes in.

This course is designed for individuals who have a low to intermediate level of Spanish, providing them with an extensive focus on medical vocabulary, grammar structures and Latin American cultures.

Language for Life is a Spanish language and culture academy based in Seville, Spain, which focuses on providing specialized courses for individuals internationally who wish to improve their command of the Spanish language so they can be more effective communicators at work, at school and while travelling.

Our motto is that foreign languages are an essential element of communication that enrich our communities for life, and for that reason, culture studies are an integral part of our courses.

The academy was founded in 2020 as a response to the COVID-19 pandemic. Our initial course offerings are geared toward health care professionals as a tool to help them navigate this unprecedented era.

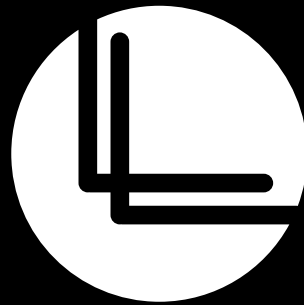

Our professors are native Spanish speakers with over 15 years of experience teaching Spanish language and culture in universities across North America and Europe.
